Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Gentlemen,

Enough is enough regarding the attempted AOL/Netscape interference with the settlement of the Microsoft case. It should be remembered that the "injured" netscape was sold for an enormous amount of money during the litigation over it's "injury by Microsoft". If the company that bought it thought it was so "injured", why did they pay so much money for it? The simple fact is, Netscape is not as good as the Microsoft product, and people do not want to buy it. Please proceed with the settlement, disregarding the attempt to prolong it by AOL.
